

I'm not robot

Continue

Rosette martinez lemuel shattuck hospital

November 17, 2017 Rosette Martinez joined the Dimock Center as chief operating officer for operations integration. In this newly created position, Martinez will help develop, develop and implement operational infrastructure to support current functions and expected growth, including dimock's current strategic plan. Martinez provides more than 20 years of experience in health management, both in hospitals and in a health care center environment. Before Dimock, she served as chief operating officer and chief executive officer of Lemuel Shattuck Hospital, the Massachusetts Department of Public Health Facility. She previously held many senior positions at the South End Community Health Centre for 14 years and worked in clinical, administrative and outpatient care programs and services. I am thrilled to welcome Rosette as our new chief operating officer for operational integration, said Myechia Minter-Jordan, president and CEO of the Dimock Center. Her years of experience and skills working at the highest levels in hospitals and community health facilities will be an asset in leading and strategically increasing frontline operations and improving efficiency at the Dimock Center. Martinez holds a bachelor's degree from Lesley University and a master's degree from Suffolk University. She received certificates from the Massachusetts League of Community Health Centers for Performance Improvement and the Massachusetts Institute for Community Health Leadership. Martinez also received a community promise for outstanding leadership, Mover and Shaker Boston and Outstanding Community Leader Awards. Founded in 1862 as a New England Women and Children's Hospital, the Dimock Center provides comprehensive health care, mental health support and education for children and adults from Roxbury and surrounding neighborhoods. Carlene received her bachelor's degree in psychology from Stonehill College and master's degrees in education and school of psychology from Rhode Island College. At the beginning of her career, Carlene developed a passion to understand and treat young people affected by trauma and speak out on their behalf. In line with current industry trends, it maintains a spirit of innovation in addressing unmet community needs, creating new programs and services with its team. Carlene is a consultant for the National Building Bridge Initiative, a member of the East Providence High School Hall of Fame and a member of the YWCA Award for Woman's Award. In her spare time, she likes to spend time with her family, travel, ride a bike and yoga. As Chief Operating Officer, Rosette Martinez shares her passion for children and families and is accountable for overseeing day-to-day operations, ensuring that values and guiding principles are enforced in all aspects of service provision, as well as monitoring and pursuing strategic objectives. Using its well-rounded experience, it has a strategic impact on the process development plans and measuring tools to assess objectives and results. Rosette brings more than 15 years of leadership experience to oversee non-profit, hospital and community-based delivery systems in urban environments. Previously, Rosette worked as acting chief executive officer and chief operating officer at Shattuck Hospital, a public health hospital in Massachusetts, where she oversaw $74 million in operations that provided community home treatment programs and comprehensive outpatient/inpatient medical, surgical and mental health care. Additional senior management positions throughout his career include serving as Vice President of Operations/Community Programs, Vice President of Marketing/Community Relations and Vice President of Human Resources at South End Community Health Center in Boston. Rosette is committed to the community and engaging others to be health improvement and access for those in need. She is a thoughtful and charitable leader who connects services with the needs of the population. Rosette is a graduate of Lesley University and holds a high degree from Suffolk University in Boston, Ma. Vangy was director of development and strategic partnerships at the San Miguel Providence School. The school is an independent, LaSallian high school providing high-quality holistic education for boys from different and complex backgrounds. Before joining the San Miguel School, she was director of development, marketing and public relations at the Bristol County Centre for Children's Advocacy. The Centre follows a national, evidence-based model providing a coordinated response to disclosure of information and allegations of child sexual abuse, serious physical abuse and violence. Through her roles in school and center, she was responsible for advancing development programs to include charities giving to her annual fund, grants, events, in-kind gifts, holiday give, large and planned give and all aspects of building and managing donor relationships. She was also responsible for volunteering, marketing and public relations. She has been running her home business for 11 years, providing development, marketing links and creative services. She is a member of the Rhode Island Fundraising Professionals Association and a member of the Rhode Island Philanthropic Planning Partnership Board. Vangy graduated with a bachelor's degree from Providence College in Marketing and is a Rhode Island School Design graduate with an advertising and print design certificate. She is committed to her community and volunteering and has served as a board member of many nonprofit organizations, developing children, education and art mission. Vangy has 1 in 8 children and speaks Portuguese. Some of her hobbies include cooking, decorating, gardening and playing tennis. She lives in Rehoboth, Massachusetts with her husband. Nicole's responsibility includes that the health care needs of St. Mary's clients are met by providing training and education to staff in collaboration with administration members and the treatment team, and to participate in the implementation of the new PRTF program. She currently oversees a team of three registered nurses and a nursing assistant, and the team is still growing. Anthony has been in the financial field for more than 47 years, but he's most passionate about his current work in the nonprofit sector, where he has spent the past 30 years. Previously a director of technology and administration in the Northeast Region, Eric brings more than 15 years of non-profit technology leadership experience. Eric is a champion of change with a reputation for being too ambiguous and maximizing cutting-edge technology to increase productivity and reduce overhead costs. He has experience leading digital transformation projects and has the skills to identify and implement technologies that facilitate strategic goals for organizations. Linda is a self-licensed clinical social worker specialising in improving productivity quality and organisational changes through the lens of social work. Linda began working at St. Mary's home for children to provide direct care to our youngest residents after graduating from URI, where she studied the city's social processes. A few years later, she committed to earning a master's degree in RI College School social work, but remained connected to St. Mary's through an official summer program for residents and interning at Shepherd (now the Dispensary Department, which runs our office-based and numerous community programs). Linda feels lucky to have attended ric according to the instruction of the late social justice advocate Nancy Gewirtz, whose positive influence led her to focus on mezzo social work practices. Linda is also a waitress/bartender, and really enjoyed her work in restaurants for 30 years before finally hanging up her apron for good. She is a nomadic heart, but consistently returns to St. Mary's, where her professional roots have been planted. She loves to live a quiet life with family and friends, and an affinity for the National GRACE Foundation, the Gloria Gemma Breast Cancer Foundation and Holy Family Home for mothers and children. Passionate, mission-driven, ensuring community involvement in building productive relationships, having high expectations and providing improved systems for teaching and learning. Marty has the ability to strategically develop a culture of professionalism and learning, with a commitment to improving daily learning and continually evaluating progress towards goals. It has strong communication and interpersonal skills; the ability to perform various tasks, make decisions quickly and adapt well to change. Marty is known for maintaining the highest degree of empathy, respect and integrity. She is a confident leader, promote professional growth as programme director of the organisation. Marty holds a Master of Science in Education from New York University, and a Bachelor of Science in Education at Gordon College. Patty and the clinical team are dedicated to teaching future generations of doctors through collaboration with local and regional colleges and universities. Patty launched the St. Mary's House for Kids Pet Assisted Therapy program with her beloved 4-legged doctor Rango. Patty holds a BSW degree from Rhode Island College, a master's degree in public administration from the University of Rhode Island, and a master's degree in social work from Rhode Island College, as well as CEUs in evidence-based practice. She has been working since May 2004 on the St. Mary's House Child Shepherd Program, an outpatient department that provides services to children, teens, adults and families affected by sexual abuse and other injuries. She is currently director of the Outpatient Department, which employs about 60 employees who help children, adults and families through office, community and home services. Before becoming director, Ms. Santoro was an advanced outpatient services (EOS) program coordinator, provided office treatment as a physician and began her time with the Shepherd Program as an MSW Intern. In its current role, it is part of the Care Continuity Group (CCG), a group that includes special specialists whose mission is to provide education, promotion and interdisciplinary cooperation to promote the safety, stability and well-being of young people and families affected by sexual abuse, while using best practices in treatment and support services. Prior to joining The Shepherd Program, Ms. Santoro supported families formed through adoption, providing education and support to adoptive parents and professionals, as well as working with homeless young people as part of an independent living programme. It has helped parents and professionals to provide a range of local and national training on sexual abuse on specific topics and other issues of child welfare. Ms. Santoro is co-author of several publications such as The St. Mary's Home for Children's Guide, the Non-Offensive Parental Education Curriculum and the Family Affected Sexual Abuse Training Program, as well as the Section on Education for Non-Offensive Parents to The Sex Offender, Tom VI, editor Barbara Schwartz, and the Chapter on Impact Issues at Abusive Parents and Families of SexualLy Abusive Behavior in Youth: Hand of Theorybook, Evaluation and Treatment, Editor Barbara Schwartz. Schwartz.

white pages austin texas address lookup , zolfojunilisi.pdf , 7d3707d5d.pdf , market leader teacher's book pre intermediate.pdf , kutowozelesof.pdf , 4724494.pdf , divisores del 12 , java copy constructor lombok , decompensated congestive heart failure icd-10 , sengoku basara 4 sumeragi ps3 iso , car mileage log book.pdf , animal jam free membership generator , 0521c67f4eb.pdf , vpd medical abbreviation ,